A man who had been deaf and dumb for fifty years, from an attack of small pox, felt off a roof and recovered both hearing and speech. It might be inconvenient to introduce this method of treatment at the state deaf and dumb asylum, but the latest developments of medical science should not be overlooked.—Ex.

FRANK B. CLARE.

We Live and Learn.

A Portland, Me., man, who seldom attends church services, was persuaded to hear a sermon last Sunday, and was much impressed. "You are never too old to learn," he remarked confidentially to an old friend. "Now, I always thought Sodom and Gomorrah were husband and wife, and I find they were nothing but cities."

The Clerks Needed The Money.

The Democratic legislative bodilars fished about $250,000 of the state's money at the sessions of 1899 with which to remunerate those 463 "clerks," but they regard the racket being raised about that little financial transaction as altogether unwarranted and impertinent. They are prepared to show, if required, that the beneficiaries of the "appropriation" seven of them in one family in some instances—really needed the money. And if an inquisitive public isn't satisfied with that it may go to some other source for further information, so far as the Democracy is concerned.

Death of A. J. Hunter.

He was a member of the M. E. Church and also a member of the K. P. Lodge of Wellsville. Several members of Montgomery City K. P. Lodge attended the funeral Sunday.

Et Tu, Brenning!

Colonel Mose Wetmore has been hurt in his heart, described by a faithful Wetmore as "bigger than all outdoors and all inside." "If you will look in summer resorts," said Colonel Bryan the other day, "you will find there the beneficiaries of protection." And Colonel Mose looks in summer resorts and he sees his bosom's brother, Colonel Bryan, among Colonel Mose's stately pleasure domes at Mueola or hunting the rabbit intrepidly in Colonel Mose's game reservation. To be called a protectionist by those lips to be stricken by that hand! What skills it to skin the Octopus and then be skinned by a marble-hearted fend.—N. Y. Sun.

DEMOCRATS NOT INFALLIBLE. The foremost democrat of the State says his party is not infallible and thanks God that his party is not. Mr. Dockery received a revelation at Greenville, Mo., the other day when he made the above statement. This is one proposition that Dockery can get "dead-oodles" of proof for between now and Nov. 6th. Every Republican in the State can be convinced that the democratic party can make mistakes and there are some democrats who can believe in the mistakes of the old gang, too. Still, to the most of the democrats, the State House Ring is infallible, inflexible and infinite, on resources to patch up their old record, through the rents and torn places of which a hurricane or a "jimmicane" is now rushing at a 2-40 gait.

Dockery ought to thank God before each meal and at bed-time that his party is fallible and then stick to the boggy-man of militarism, for that will make the moss stand straight up on the spinal column of some of the old guard. Dockery says the democratic majority was delivered over to the lobby and the devil, so to speak, by that heroic little republican minority. This is another evidence that the party to which he belongs is not infallible.

They explain that they spent $3,400,000 belonging to the school fund and try to justify their acts by saying that the republicans used up $900,000, which they did not, if the Missouri Supreme court is to be believed.

Those 463 legislative clerks and spit-box cleaners who were paid $2.50 and $3. per day to point the nozzle of a water hose for one consecutive minute each day at legislative tobacco quills and cigar snipes, shows other evidences of fallibility in Dockery's party.

But this lot of the school fund seems to have terrorized those under the dome of the capitol and all the state officers and all the nominees on the democratic ticket have explained how it happened, but before this article reaches the public, we expect to hear them say the republican minority in Missouri stole it from us and they all ought to be hanged.

One Woman's Galveston Experience. Mrs. L. A. McCashin, a survivor of the Galveston storm, who is staying with friends in Appleton City, relates most graphically to a local newspaper representative some of the incidents of that awful visitation. She owned four houses in the stricken city but now has nothing left except the clothing she wears and a few things in a small valise. When the waves came Mrs. McCashin took refuge on the roof of her cottage and remained there from 6 o'clock in the evening until the next morning, the roof in the meantime having floated several blocks and lodged on the top of a two-story residence. During the awful hours of the night a big dog swam to Mrs. McCashin's place of refuge, and there was a struggle to decide which should occupy the vantage ground, but the brute finally concluded that there was sufficient room for himself and the woman, and he quietly laid down by her side. Floating timbers injured Mrs. McCashin so that when she was rescued in the morning she had to be taken to the hospital. Mrs. McCashin had lived in Galveston many years. She says that heretofore when the water came into the streets it has been made a time for rejoicing. Men and boys would get into boats and forage for lumber, wood and the like. It was so this time when the first waves came but it soon turned to a scene of death and destruction.

MEXICO STREET FAIR AWARDS. MEXICO, Mo., Oct. 11.—The principal attraction at the Mexico street fair to-day was the flower parade, with fifteen entries. Miss Jessie Davis won the sweepstakes, with a topless surrey in white and cerise poppies. The rig was drawn by two black horses. The occupants were Misses Jessie and Eugenia Davis, Elizabeth Helm and Mary Steele, all dressed in white, with parasols of white and cerise. Mrs. James Johnson was given the first prize in the contest for the best single rig. Mrs. Chas. Buckner being second. The winning rig was decorated with lavender and white carysanthemums, and was drawn by sorrel horses. The occupants were Mrs. James Johnson, Misses Jennie and Adeline Harrison and Miss Alice Brooks. They were dressed in white with lavender and white parasols. In the contest for the best double rig the following awards were made: The Misses Edmonds first, Mrs. Tony Buckner second, Mrs. John Maxwell third, and Miss Bell Morris fourth. The winning rig was a one-horse trap, in lavender and white carysanthemums, and was occupied by Miss Hattie Edmonds, Miss Letha Trigg, and Miss Ida Edmonds, all in white, with lavender ribbons.

There were over 12,100 people present at the fair.

Just before the flower parade started, the horse drawing a decorated runabout, containing Misses Ryrd Locke and Alma Williams, ran north on Jefferson street and demolished the rig. The two young ladies were thrown out and quite seriously injured. Miss Locke on the head and Miss Williams about the body. Miss Locke was unconscious for some time.

Henry Martie of Goshen, Ind., was taken ill and a physician diagnosed his case as inflammation of the bowels. The patient grew worse and his brother declared that warm cat skins applied freely to the suffering man's stomach would relieve him. Shotguns were brought into play by the neighbors, a number of cats were killed and the hides were used as suggested. The sick man is now well, and as many Goshenites believe he was cured by the skins, cats would be wise to emigrate from the neighborhood.

Rev. Dr. Theodore J. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, makes haste to correct a report of a political speech recently made by him, in which he was made to speak of the funeral of Mr. Bryan on the day after the election. The reverend gentleman explains that what he really spoke about was the funeral of Bryan on the day named, and he takes occasion to quote the remark of the miser who said that the funeral would take place if the fragments of his deceased could be found.

Twenty dollar gold pieces to the value of $8,000 are to be used in floor tiling of a gorgeous saloon now being fitted up in South Bend, Ind. The tiles are especially made to contain $20 gold pieces; the depression for their reception allowing the coin to sink one thirty-second of an inch below the surface, thus avoiding friction. Each gold eagle will be soldered to a wire which will run down through an ordinary floor thus securing the coin in place.

CYRUS P. WALBRIDGE. His Common Sense Explanation Of Republican Principles Pleased The People.

Ex-Mayor of St. Louis, Cyrus P. Walbridge, spoke to a large and intelligent audience at the court house in this city Monday afternoon. Mr. Walbridge is not a political orator or stump speaker. He is a plain, honest business man of St. Louis, who has been successful in life and who now enjoys the high esteem of his business associates, republicans and democrats alike. There were no flashes of oratory, no scintillating metaphors, no flashing similes, but solid, hard business-like propositions, based on sound judgment and long, practical experience. In fact, it was an experience meeting, told with the profound eloquence of deep conviction of right, justice and truth.

The audience was with the speaker from start to finish and when he announced that he was through, nearly everybody wanted him to go on.

In opening his address the speaker made a short and concise statement of the St. Louis World's Fair. As Jefferson paid 15 million dollars for the Louisiana Purchase, the Fair directors proposed to spend 15 million dollars in the 100th anniversary of the event. He asked the people to vote for the two amendments to the constitution designed to help carry on the Fair.

The speaker then took up the discussion of politics and based his speech on our experiences. He showed that the balance of trade in this country during McKinley's administration far exceeded the balance of trade in the country since 1790, down to 1877, the amount of excess running away up into billions. This was not what Mr. Bryan had prophesied. Then he took up the general prosperity theme. He showed that the country had enjoyed unprecedented prosperity and that even Mr. Bryan admitted it now. He stated that Mr. Bryan said prosperity was due to the big crops and not to McKinley and the gold standard, but that Bryan forgot about the crops when he prophesied such dire calamities in 1896. He said that a man who would forget about our crops was not the kind of man to be president.

He then told about the fair and just election law the republicans passed in 1894 in this state, which provided for one democrat and one republican to stand side by side in all matters pertaining to our elections. The democrats repeated that law and passed in its place an election law that operates in St. Louis, so as to give one republican and about 175 democrats, in all matters concerning elections, even providing for democrats in the city's republican primaries. This, he said, was not fair. It was not right. He handled the imperialism and free silver theories with a master hand and left but little, if any, ground for the paramounters to stand on. Withal, Mayor Walbridge's speech was the strongest, the fairest and the most honest one ever delivered in this city.

This report would be incomplete if we did not mention the short but very efficient speech by Hon. S. T. Aydelott of Warren county, who introduced the speaker of the day. Mr. Aydelott had but a few minutes to speak but he improved the time. He showed plainly that unless the democrats acknowledged the certificates of indebtedness as a state debt, no interest could be collected from the taxpayers for the school fund after the bonded indebtedness was paid off. With $1,000,000 school fund gone, and the right to tax the people on that fund gone, the last vestige of our boasted school and seminary fund would have been swallowed up by the democracy. This statement should cause every voter to do some hard thinking before he cast his vote in November.

Miss Lucy Nowlin, who is teaching in the Whitesides district spent Saturday and Sunday with homefolks.
